A sheep, a duck, and a rooster board a balloon... Sounds like the beginning of a joke. Well, in Paris, 1783, this trio was sent up for the first test flight with living creatures.

It is a long running tradition to bring champagne on a balloon ride. At the end of a journey, aeronaunts would toast to their safe return. Conveniently, the champagne can also be offered as an apology to the angry land owners for which the balloon accidentally lands.

In 1991, Richard Branson and Per Lindstrand became the first to cross the Pacific Ocean in a hot air balloon. From Japan to Canada, they traveled over 4700 miles in 46 hours. Their balloon was the size of a 21 story building. By riding the jet stream, they were able to accelerate to more than 200 mph.

HERE ARE SOME OF OUR OTHER GREAT REGIONS

"Balloons are dependent on the atmosphere surrounding them.
They lack the ability to steer and cannot control the wind.
They can only ascend or decend to find the elevation that will push them in the direction they need to end.
Too high and you run out of air.
Too low and you meet the ground.
If you have a planned destination,
adjust your elevation that is right for where you're bound.
Sometimes you're up and, yes, sometimes you're down.
Just keep your focus on the course and make sure you're ready when it's time to meet the ground."
